

LOCAL MENTION.

AMUSEMENTS TONIGHT.

Academy—"A Montana Outlaw," 8 p. m.
Chase—"Clay Clement and the Police," 8:15 p. m.
Columbia—"The Only Way," 8:15 p. m.
Empire—"The Dainty Parces Burlesques," 8:15 p. m.
Kernan—"The Brigadiers," 8:15 p. m.
Lafayette—"The Bragging," 8:15 p. m.
National—"The Wilderness," 8:15 p. m.
Northeast—"The Bazaar," 8:15 p. m.
Willard—"The Bazaar," 8:15 p. m.

EXCURSIONS TOMORROW.

Steamer Maclester for Mount Vernon at 11 a. m. and 1:45 p. m.
Steamer Norfolk for Fort Monroe and Norfolk at 6:30 p. m.
Cars leave Aqueduct bridge for Arlington, Fort Myer and Falls Church.
Randall line for Colonial Beach, Nomini and river landings at 4 p. m.
Steamer Estelle for Glymont and intermediate landings at 9:30 a. m.

Kenny's Xmas Picture.

(size 27x28 inches) better than ever. Free Saturday, Dec. 20. C. D. Kenny Co., 8 city stores.

The Butter in Greatest Demand.

—among those who want the best is our "Eight Creamery." Pure and delicious, and fresh from the creameries. Only 25c. lb. Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co.'s stores.

When Ordering Meats, quality at reasonable prices is assured if purchased at KEANE'S, 34-35 Center mkt. and 9 Wholesale Bldg. Washington-dressed Beef and Southdown Lamb a specialty.

Sothern's Engagement Popular.

The hundreds of requests for seats for Sothern at the National Theater next week prove that this will be the most successful engagement he has ever played here. The seat and box sale opens Thursday morning at 8:30 o'clock, but though many reservations have been asked for of Manager Hapley none will be made before the opening of the sale, so that all may have equal opportunity to secure choice localities. Sothern has the strongest organization that has ever been seen in his support here. Miss Cecelia Loftus plays Ophelia in "Hamlet" and the heroine in "If I Were King."

A mule team owned by L. E. Smoot, and driven by Nicholas Carrier, collided with a street car near the Capitol and P streets yesterday, and one of the animals was knocked down. A wheel of the car passed over its foot, crushing the hoof. The injury was not regarded as very serious.

A Word in Season.

When arranging the Xmas menu remember to put down Schneider's "Malt" Bread. It insures the success of every menu, elaborate or otherwise. Sold by all grocers, 5c.

Our Christmas Candies

always give satisfaction. Leave orders early. No disappointment in delivery. Sheets, 10th and F.

At Christmas or Any Other Time
It's well to keep "Pineza" Rye on hand. Makes delicious and good. Pure, smooth and mellow. Guaranteed 8 years old. $1 quart. CHAS. KRAEMER, 735 7th st.

A cool car and a Capital Traction car came together at the Capital and P streets intersection northwest about 6 o'clock last night and both vehicles were damaged. Traffic on the road was delayed only a few minutes.

An Abundance of Christmas Supplies —Including Raisins, Currants, Citron, Mince Meat, Nuts, etc. Also the finest Poultry, Meats, Vegetables and Fruits. Guaranteed prices. CHAS. H. JERMAN, 11th and I.

Tree Toys, Favors, Scrap Pictures, &c. Gould's.

Attractive Calendars Free.

Call Room 42, Wash. Loan & Trust Bldg.

James Holmes, forty-one years old, fell from a street car at 4th and C streets northeast about 6 o'clock last night, and was painfully injured. Mr. Holmes was on his way to his home, 724 18th street northeast, at the time the accident occurred. The patrol wagon was summoned and the injured man was taken to the Casualty Hospital.

Be Sure That You Get the Best.
Our Purty Brand Horse Radish. S. Swindella & Son, 391-93 Center Market.

Large Oil Heaters, $4.00.

A. EBERLY'S SONS, 718 7th n.w.

Oil Heaters From $1.00 to $6.00.

A. EBERLY'S SONS, 718 7th n.w.

AUCTION SALES.

Today.
James W. Ratcliffe, aucr., 920 Pa. ave. n. w.—Trustees' sale of 1837 Vermont st., Washington Heights, on Tuesday, Dec. 16, at 4:30 p. m. Clarence C. Rheem and Alexander L. Henzley, trustees.

This Evening.
Walter B. Williams & Co., aucrs., 10th and D sts. n.w.—Sale of silverware, china, glassware, bric-a-brac, etc., daily at 7:30 p. m. at auction room.

Tomorrow.
C. G. Sloan & Co., aucrs., 1407 G st. n.w.—Sale of oriental rugs and carpets, on Dec. 17, 18 and 19, at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m., at auction rooms.

Marcus Notes, aucr.—Sale of unredeemed pledges on Wednesday, December 17, at 10 a. m. at store of E. Heidenreich, 1229 Pa. ave. n.w.

Thomas J. Owen & Son, aucrs., 913 F st. n.w.—Chancery sale of Nos. 225 7th n.e. and 215 E st. n.e., on Wednesday, December 17, at 4 and 4:30 p. m. Ralph P. Barnard and Francis H. Stephens, trustees.

James W. Ratcliffe, aucr., 920 Pa. ave. n. w.—Chancery sale of property in squares 462-504, on Wednesday, December 17, at 4 p. m. Sidney T. Thomas and Irving Williams, trustees.

CITY AND DISTRICT.

Its 78th Anniversary.
Washington Commandery, Knights Templar, at its convocation to-morrow will determine upon the manner of celebrating the seventy-eighth anniversary of the foundation of the commandery. This is the oldest commandery of the jurisdiction, having been instituted January 14, 1823. The celebration will probably take the form of a banquet. Columbia Commandery, No. 2, the next oldest in the District, instituted nearly forty years ago, is arranging to give a ball in January. The matter is in charge of the commandery's entertainment committee, headed by Past Commander J. Henry Small.

See pages 14 and 15, part 2, houses for sale by Stone & Fairfax.—Advt.

On Charge of Arson.
Clarence Wade, colored, twenty-four years old, was locked up at the 10th precinct station this morning on suspicion of arson. He was arrested after a slight fire had occurred at the house of Mrs. Sarah Carter, at Woodburn. The fire occurred about 7:30 o'clock, the side porch being badly scorched. It is evident that the fire had been started by an incendiary and Policemen Lord and Boland arrested Wade. He denies that he has any knowledge of the affair.

Real Estate Bargain.
Stone & Fairfax have the best. Read their advertisements in this paper.—Advt.

IN CONTINUOUS SESSION.

Almas Temple's Charity Committee Begins Work for Christmas.

Almas Temple's Christmas charity committee began last night a continuous session at the office of Potentate Raymond, in the Bond building. Except for the time taken in sleep, the committee will be at work from now until Christmas night. It will not always be composed of the same nobles, but the work will go on uninterrupted until Almas' share in the holiday festival is over. The committee is sending out and answering letters regarding contributions and other matters pertaining to the Christmas charity, and completing arrangements for that event. It will please the little ones for whom the Christmas tree is to be erected in National Rifles' Armory to know that the committee has already bought half a ton of candy and a thousand pairs of little stockings, and it has only one penny buying.

For the more substantial Christmas baskets for the needy, large quantities of hams and fowls have been purchased, and many other details attended to. The work will keep the committee busy all the time, and the request for contributions from Thomas P. Morgan, treasurer of the Almas charity fund, will receive additional contributions from those desiring to see the good work extended. The committee has in Almas' excursion last summer will permit.

Stone & Fairfax

Offer many excellent bargains in houses. See pages 14 and 15, part 2.—Advt. See page 14, part 2.—Advt.

Oil-Burner Testing Plant Idle.

The United States naval oil-burner testing plant at the foot of 8th street was lying idle for several days for want of the necessary oil fuel with which to make tests. Since the plant went into operation, about six months ago, tests of a large number of oil-burning devices have been made, with varying degrees of success. The inventor is allowed to arrange his burners and give them a preliminary trial; then the experts take charge and an eight-hour test is made. The results of oil-burner tests used is noted, and the results are recorded and filed away for future reference, so that when the tests are ended the government will have in detail the work done by each burner, and the best one can then be selected, should it be deemed advisable to use fuel in the smallest size of the burner. It is expected the tests of burners will continue for six months or a year longer.

Burnett's Vanilla Extract is the fixed standard of excellence. It has outlived criticism. It is the finest and purest vanilla extract that can be bought.—Advt.

A Sacrifice Sale.

Persons taking advantage of the sacrifice sale that is now in progress at the clothing establishment, 914 F street northwest, are receiving exceptional values for their money. The entire stock of clothing that was bought by Mr. Grosvenor for the winter trade is being sold at very low prices. The store was crowded yesterday and today with bargain hunters. The bargain sale is caused by the fact that Mr. Grosvenor is compelled to leave his present place of business and at the present time has not another place in which to put his stock either for storage or as a sales room.

Meet me at "The Rosery," 1110 F st.—Ad.

Organ Recital Tonight.

An interesting organ recital will be given by Ernest Winchester this evening at 8 o'clock in St. Paul's Church, 234 street northwest near Washington Circle. The program will include works of Handel, Gounod, Chopin, Wagner and Von Flotow. Mr. William D. McFarland, tenor, and Mr. George Frederick Benett, baritone, of Chicago, who is visiting in the city, will sing. Mr. Benett is at the navy yard, will be the assistant soloist. The public will be welcome.

Homes. Investments.

Look over the choice list for sale by Stone & Fairfax.—Advt.

Colonial Life Association.

At a regular meeting of Columbia Colony No. 28, Colonial Life Association, held Saturday night, at the Raleigh building, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: Jacob C. Peacock, governor; H. W. Wells, lieutenant governor; H. N. Jones, secretary and treasurer; Samuel B. Roane, chaplain; William A. Rutherford, master-at-arms; W. T. Rosenbaum, inner guard, and John E. Jackson, outer guard.

Florida and South.

Two through trains daily. Special through steppers to Pinchurst on 7 p. m. train Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Send for excursion rates and resort books. Ticket office 1421 Penna. ave.—Advt.

Leading Imported Beers on Draught
—and in bottles at the famous Rathskeller of Hotel Fritz Reuter, 4 1/2 and Pa. ave.—Advertisement.

For Ensuing Term.

The following are the newly-elected officers of Golden Rule Tent, No. 8, Knights of the Maccabees, for the ensuing term: Past commander, J. W. Steward; commander, J. W. Trumble; lieutenant commander, W. H. Hesselek; record keeper, W. J. Thoroughgood (third term); chaplain, E. A. Smith; secretary, H. H. Hesselek; arms, R. G. Pulliam; first master of guard, William F. Hunt; second master of guard, C. Smith; sergeant-at-arms, H. H. Hesselek; trustees for two years, W. D. Thompson; for three years, E. A. Smith.

An International Arrangement.

Dewar's Scotch whisky in the best American highballs.—Advt.

Child Serious Burned.

While playing about a stove yesterday afternoon at her parent's home, 602 10th street southwest, Blanche Curry was severely burned about the body. The child is not yet three years old. She was taken to the Emergency Hospital, where Dr. Morant treated her. Her mother and her mother subsequently took her home.

Oriental Rugs at Sloan's.

The sale of the palatial oriental rugs and carpets to close the partnership of Boleter & Co. of F and M streets, at Sloan's, 1407 G st., tomorrow and following days, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. A grand opportunity to secure useful and valuable Xmas gifts.—Advertisement.

Trustee Elected.

The four Scottish Rite bodies controlling the Scottish Rite Cathedral, on G street between 10th and 11th streets—Mithras Lodge of Perfection, Evangelist Chapter No. 1013, Robert E. Bruce Council of Kadash and Albert Pike Consistory—held a joint meeting last evening, by representatives, and elected Frank H. Thomas member of the board of trustees to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Oscar Roome. Resolutions were passed in acknowledgment of Mr. Roome's distinguished services.

TODAY'S STAR BY MAIL.

As the six parts of today's Star weighs 2 pounds it will require 8 cents in stamps to mail the complete issue by those desiring to mail the paper themselves.

Copies will be mailed from the office for 5 cents, postage prepaid, to any address in the United States, outside of Washington.

AMUSEMENTS.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.—There were some empty chairs at the Columbia Theater last night, when that really great actor, Martin Harvey, made his first appearance before a Washington audience. These vacant places represented so many opportunities overlooked, for Mr. Harvey is one of the very few players whose art is genuine and unaffected and at the same time impressive. He has no need to affect a vocal volume that jars the atmosphere or to lend himself to extraneous and needless display, for, of course, a master of the technical side of his profession; the eminence which he has attained in his art guaranteed that this much might be taken for granted, even though he made his appearance. He has in addition to this the tense nervous force, the compelling magnetism which establishes a bond of sympathy between the actor and the audience and makes the latter an animated fellow-being and not a mere momentary fiction.

It has been contended that Dickens' characters are exact copies of the real life personalities of humanity. Mr. Harvey's Sidney Carton, for the Sidney Carton of the stage belongs to Mr. Harvey almost as much as the "A Tale of Two Cities" belongs to Charles Dickens. It is a refutation of those criticisms, so far, at least, as this one novel is concerned. The actor is intense because of its simple realism.

This actor's personality is wonderfully striking. Although he is not a large man physically, he has a great deal of intellectuality and artistic fervor. In appearance he is well built, without being rugged, and fine featured, without being harsh. He has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a devotee—whose rewards are found primarily and chiefly in work itself. It seems almost that the actor's personality should arise from the mere observation of a man engaged in performing a play that he has a great deal of the noble and manly which mark the work of so many English stage celebrities, and while he is always the center of interest, there is no trace of egotism in his methods. He is a new type; a relief from the bustling, bombastic performer who has worked his way up and is still struggling to get on. He steps into a position of enviable eminence as one to the manner born, and carries himself without a trace of self-consciousness. He is a natural inheritance. He does not seek to regard his art as merely a means of earning a living, but rather to hold himself as a chosen instrument—a